On the Other Side of Judgment: Exploring the Housing First Approach

Reflect

- Clasen-Kelly says in her talk that “love is not a feeling in your heart. Love is an action.” To what extent would you agree with her, and why?
- What does it mean to look at others through what Clasen-Kelly describes as “eyes of judgment”? What beliefs or assumptions lead to this way of seeing others? What do we miss when we see the world in this way?
- According to the Gospels, Jesus lived in poverty and may even have been homeless. What do you think we are supposed to learn from the fact that God became flesh in the person of a poor and homeless individual?

Respond

- What do you think of the housing first approach that Clasen-Kelly describes? What are its advantages? What questions do you have about it?
- Clasen-Kelly discusses the importance of looking at our neighbors with non-judgmental lenses. What sorts of people (groups or individuals) do you struggle to see without judgment? Why do you think this is?
- Where in your own life do you need to take steps toward making love an action, not just a feeling? What would this require and how might it change you?
